

Dead Zone Boys, the third album from Jookabox (Indianapolis-born David "Moose" Adamson and Co.), is love story meets psychedelic zombie-musical. The zombie part came easy: Moose grew up on the east side of Indianapolis in the 90s, an area plagued by constant recession, pandemic homicide, and racial tension. It was this frantic energy and violence that infused itself into the Jookabox experience while musically nodding to early Ween, Black Sabbath, and fellow Indiana native, the King of Pop.

PRESS QUOTES

"Jookabox is a ferocious, funny and often fascinating mash-up of clattering chorals and distorted incantations...gloriously deranged trash-can blues" - TimeOut London

"For all of his experimentation, Adamson never once loses sight of the song" (four stars) - Uncut

"From paranormal themes to the genius/madness precipice, this one-man experimental collection bewitches and beguiles on repeated listen." - MOJO

"Ropechain draws on old-school hip hop, pitched-up country samples and heavy electro-beats to be an innovative, fusion-filled treat." - Loud & Quiet
